Scarlet,

I have already been on top of things, and you are fine. Don't worry. 😊

It's a two-fold issue, but it's all paperwork related and we'll get it sorted out. The problem is that you are on the old program, which shows you have to have 88 hours. You are actually going to have 85 hours (I think). The way we'll fix that is we're going to get a random elective and do a waiver to count that in your program. I've already talked to the registrar's office and that won't be a problem.

The other issue (which is another easy fix) is that the SPED 525 you took isn't showing up in iCap the right way. We need it to count for SPED 425 (which it 100% will), but the paperwork we already did wasn't entered correctly.

I'm going to get the paperwork filled out for these waivers, and I'll send them to you to sign (or I can sign you for you with your permission after you've seen them).

In other words, don't be nauseous. This will get fixed and I'm already on top of it and you will graduate this December.

Dr. Logsdon

Hello Dr. Logsdon,

I just wanted to forward this email to you that I just received regarding my graduation status. I am currently serving as a long term substitute and have my first parent meeting today, so that email made me quite nauseous lol. I just wanted to check with you to hopefully calm my nerves.

Thanks,
