Hi Rob,

We haven't taught this in a long time, so this might be a question for CEBS folks. I'm copying Jeremy, though I know their UE is now literacy, so might not be relevant. It was always ok in the past—Cierra used to teach it for us—but times change. I'm planning on Ashley Edwards Cook being IoR for fall.

Thanks,

Merrall

Hey Jo Ann and ccing Merrall,

I'm generally okay with this but want to confirm with Merrall that we haven't had any challenges credentialing folks to teach this course with any MA or MS degree. I haven't been intimately involved with credentialing and am filling in while we replace Beth.

Hi Rob,

PCAL needs to hire someone to teach the PCAL University Experience course so we are creating a part-time faculty posting (like all the others). Does this look ok to you? It's little more general as far as the degree- just stating 'Master's' vs 'Master's in the discipline' and removing the terminal degree requirement for graduate level courses since that does not apply.

Potter College of Arts & Letters (PCAL) is accepting applications to create a pool of qualified faculty to teach the PCAL University Experience course. We are seeking part time faculty for day and evening classes at the main campus location.

Requirements:

A master's degree. Prior teaching experience and experience with online education is desirable.

Thanks,
